In the Bible, God and the Lord Jesus call certain ones their friends, but no human ever refers to God or Jesus as their friend. It's not a mutual, reciprocal friendship. The Bible refers to both Abraham (2 Chron. 20:7; Isa. 41:8; James 2:23) and Moses (Exod. 33:11) as friends of God. Jesus here calls the disciples His friends.

Christian friends help us enjoy God by enjoying him with us. It's tempting to flip and distort this formula by using God as a means to enjoy people more. If we only go to him to ask for spouses, friends, or kids to enjoy, it reveals we see God as the means to someone else. We should be doing the opposite: looking for more of him in other people.

Friends Of God Homilies By Josemaria Escriva

God created us to be His friends. This was the divine plan right from the beginning, when Adam and Eve were first created – and it had its origin in the love of God. It was, however, a friendship with a difference. On a human level we usually choose friends who are similar to us – those with like interests or a kindred personality.
